

RULES AND PROCEDURES OF THE CALL FOR TENDER FOR PROMOTERS OF PROJECTS FOR THE COLLABORATIVE PROTOTYPING WORKSHOP LAB#2 THE METABOLIC SUBLIME

1.- PRESENTATION

The Metabolic Sublime is the second in a series of LAB(s) that will unfold throughout 2022 and 2023 by Medialab Matadero. Conceived as multidisciplinary research and collaborative production laboratories, each LAB will offer a four-monthly programme of Collaborative Prototyping Workshops, Artistic Projects, Transversal Workshops and Seminars and Public Events related to Medialab's main lines of research at Matadero Madrid.

The main activity of each LAB will consist of a two-week long prototyping workshop led by renowned artists and thinkers during which 8 collective projects related to the themes of Sentient Media will be developed. These projects will be selected by means of an international and public call for tender. Once they have been selected, the projects will be made public and a second call for tender launched to find collaborators keen to take part in the development of the selected projects.

2.- OBJECTIVE

In accordance with the principles of transparency, equality and competition, and in line with the programmes of Matadero Madrid, the objective of this call for tender is to select a maximum of 8 projects which shall then be developed in a collaborative manner within the framework of the Collaborative Prototyping of the LAB#02 THE METABOLIC SUBLIME, between January 25 and February 7, 2022.

During the Collaborative Prototyping Workshop of LAB#2 THE METABOLIC SUBLIME a maximum of 8 proposals selected from among the respondents to this open call, shall be developed simultaneously. The submitted proposals must necessarily be open to the participation of collaborators who subsequently and by means of another open call, express their interest in participating and are able to contribute to their development during the workshop.

Theme of LAB#2: The Metabolic Sublime

We inhabit a complex system of flows and assemblages; power grids, mineral exploitation, urban peripheries, hydrological cycles, logistics chains, tropical rainforests, financial markets... hybrid mechanisms that terraform the surface of our planet in an endless loop of fracture, change and rearrangement, defining the current and future habitability of system Earth.

LAB#02 'The Metabolic Sublime' seeks to re-imagine current energy regimes on a planetary scale, and the role we humans will have to play to implement new paradigms. But also, how their implementation will in turn transform us, demanding new customs, practices and cultures.

The term “metabolism” – from the Greek μεταβολή (metabole = change) plus the suffix -ισμός (-ism = quality, system)– defines the energetic processes that give rise to the physical and chemical transformation of any given body. On a horizon in which any form of environmental viability requires a necessary interdependence between ecology and technology, “metabolic” becomes a universal concept able to transgress the conventional binomials between natural and artificial, micro and macro, or biological and geological to define and relate processes of different condition, scale and temporality.

From the vast agro-industrial complexes that feed our cities, to the photosynthetic microorganisms that sustain the invisible chemical balance of the atmosphere, any system defined by a process of material or energetic transformation, can be understood in metabolic terms.

In this sense, and in the context of the current climate crisis, the search for the “sublime” in the geochemical dance that moves the world is both a chimera and a provocation. A chimera because it implies confronting the technological, ecological and political constraints of our current governance models, which are unable to address ecosystemic issues that transcend the sovereign limits of their territorial jurisdiction. And a provocation because it reveals the urgent need to question the cycles of capture, amalgamation, extraction and energy expenditure in which we are immersed, and to ask ourselves what other infrastructures, institutions and diplomacies are required to change them.

What would it mean to design a sublime metabolism on a planetary scale? What protocols would it entail in terms of the coexistence between humans and non-humans?

Among other things, it would mean we would need to establish new dynamics of food production, distribution and consumption, and of an agri-industrial regime capable of feeding the world without devouring the planet. It would not only imply having to design alternative strategies for waste management - both in the short and the long term - but also a crucial redefining of the very concept of waste.

It would demand a new relationship with the land, and an energy macroeconomy that is conscious of and consistent with its social and environmental implications. But, above all, it requires addressing these and other issues holistically, not as isolated processes, but as constituent and interdependent parts of a vast global metabolism. One whose transformation requires an act of radical ingenuity and imagination, if we are to overcome the dualistic discourses between environmental degrowth and idyllic techno-solutionism and build eclectic and operative structures of thought capable of navigating the ambiguities and contradictions of our entangled reality.

How the workshop will work

During the workshop, ideas will be put to the test and collaborative projects developed by different collaborators working together in interdisciplinary groups coordinated by the promoter of the project. The groups will be able to call on the support and advice of Medialab’s guest experts/mentors and will have a work space in which to develop each project.

It is expected that the workshop will work with free and open software, that the projects will be based on open standards, and that the results will be available under Creative Commons licenses that encourage reappropriation, reuse and distribution.

The workshop languages will be English and Spanish and there will be no formal translation.

At the end of the workshops, the resulting prototypes will be unveiled in public as part of the activities of the OpenLab event.

3.- PARTICIPANTS

This call is open to adult individuals and groups based both in Spain and overseas with any level of qualification and from diverse disciplines such as design, art, architecture, urban planning, economics, film, photography, journalism, digital media, environmental sciences, philosophy, engineering, social studies, political sciences, programming, materials science, activism or indeed any other field.

It's essential that participants have at least a medium-high fluency in English that allows for fluid communication with mentors and collaborators and that doesn't require constant translation during meetings.
